IMPLICATIONS OF SOVIET NUCLEAR WEAPONS TESTS DURING 1953

1. Through high priority effort starting in 1945, the USSR has achieved a full-fledged nuclear weapons production program.
2. This program will probably continue to expand.
3. At present the Soviet nuclear weapons stockpile is sufficiently large to cause substantial damage and loss of life in the nations of the free world.
4. On the basis of information now available, including that obtained from Soviet tests conducted during the summer of 1953, it is concluded that the Soviets can produce weapon types which utilize fission and thermonuclear reactions and that they now have the capability to produce weapons which vary in explosive power from the equivalent of a few thousand tons to approximately a million tons of TNT.

PROPOSED RELEASE TO THE FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD

OF CHAPTERS III, IV, V AND VI OF NIS 11 AND 21

1. It is proposed that Chapters III, IV, V and VI of NIS 11 and 21 be released to the Federal Reserve Board. The Board will study these chapters with regard to their utility to the Board's mission.

2. Following study of these specific chapters the Board may request continuing release to it of Chapters III, IV, V, and VI of all NIS. Such a continuing request would require the addition of the Board to the list of non-IAC agencies in Part II, IAC-D-45/12 (Rev. 3), 24 March 1953 but would not require a revision of Par. 1 of that document.
